Royal Gets More Dirt Than Any Other Vacuum Cleaner---We Can Prove It!

After several months of carefully testing all the various Vacuum Cleaners on the Western Market we have found that Royal gets more dirt by actual test than any other cleaner—no exception.

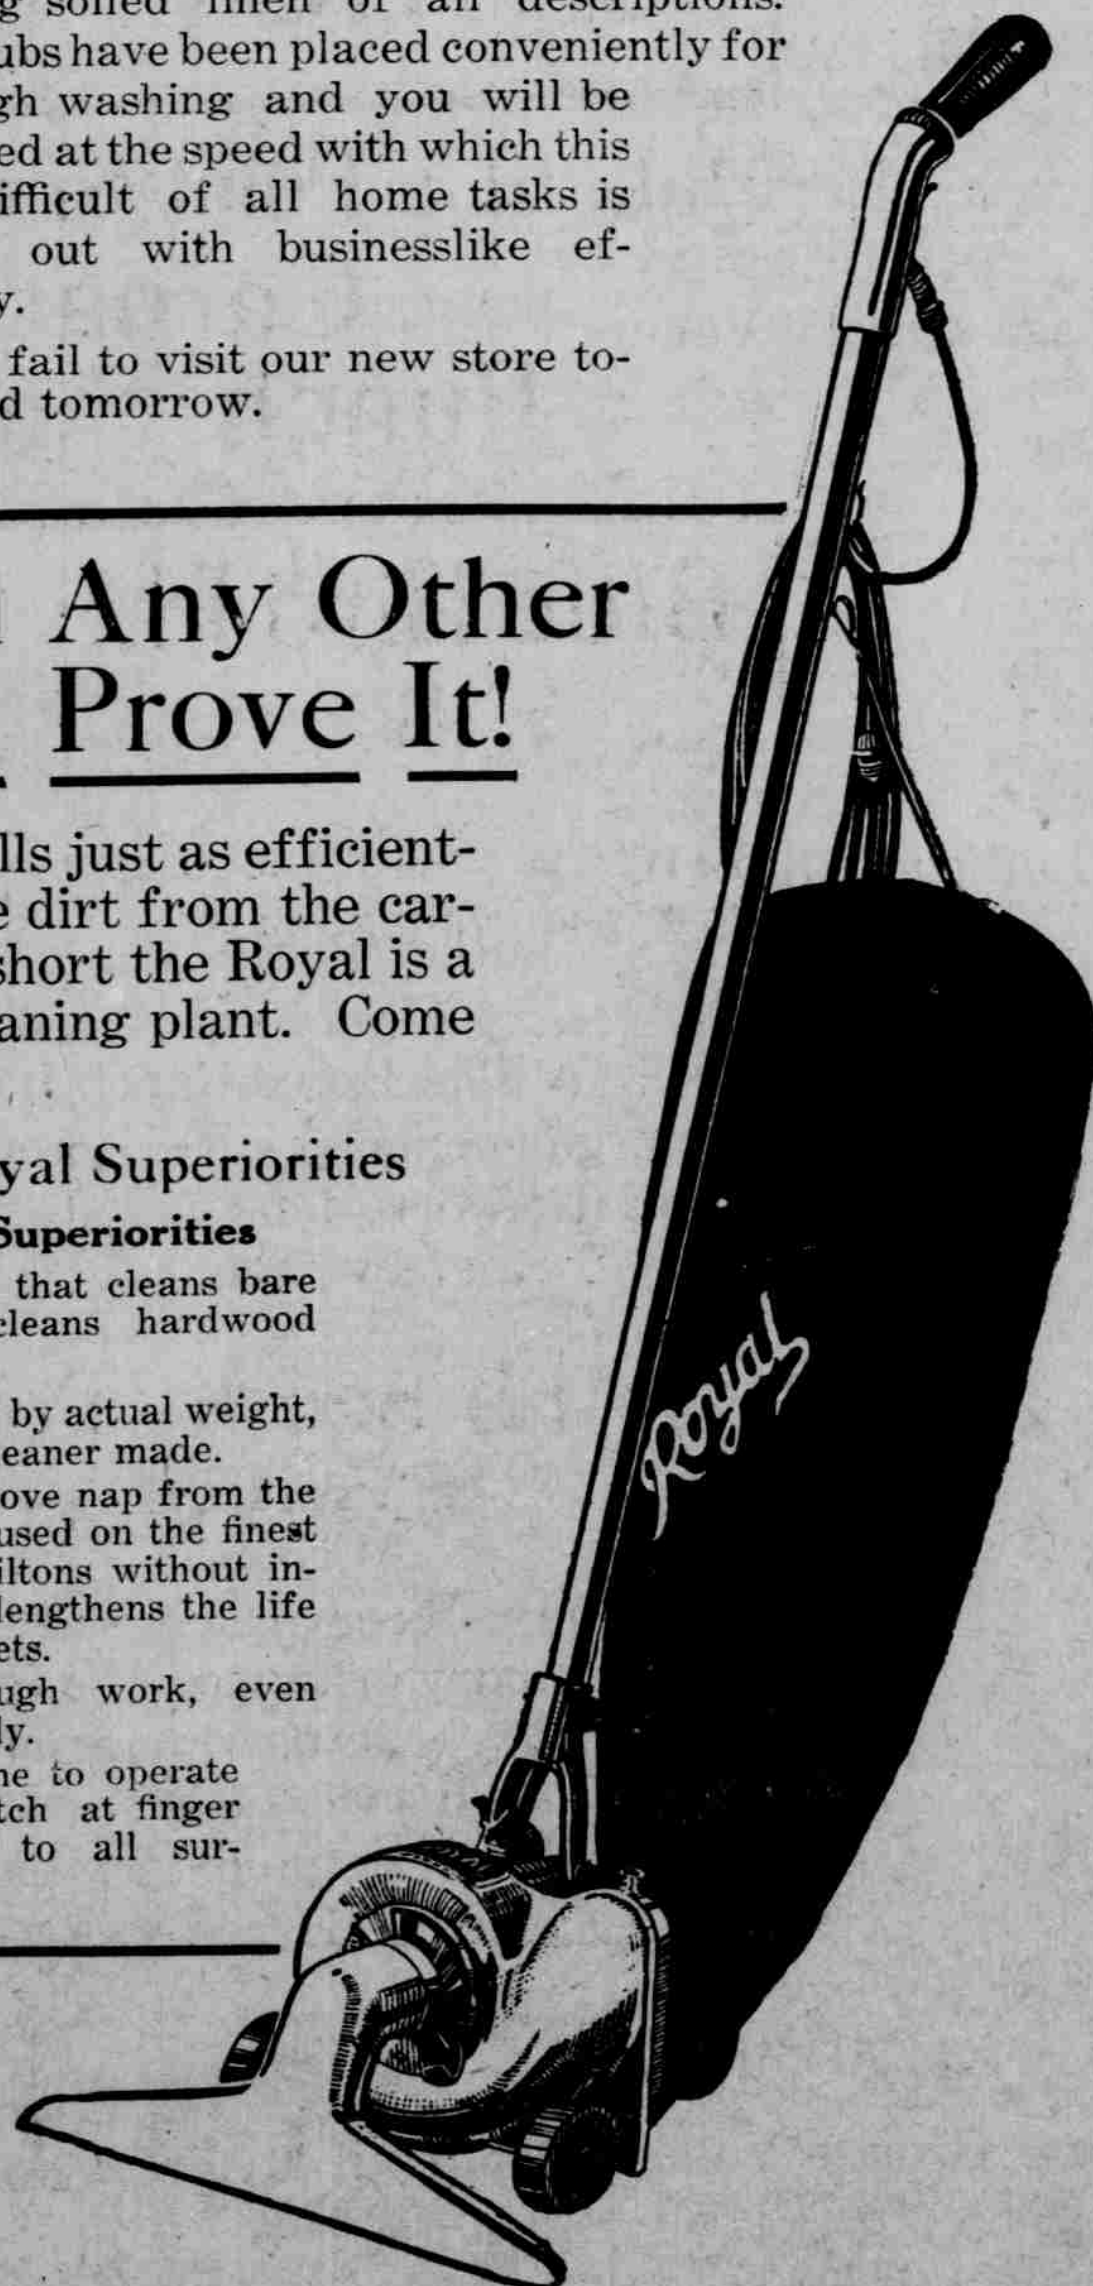

Our sales room is equipped for excellent Vacuum Cleaner tests. Not only can we show that Royal gets more dirt from the carpets and rugs but it is the only cleaner that will perfectly clean bare floor surfaces—hardwood floors, linoleum, etc.—without steaming or scratching. We know what Royal will do—we want to show you. It will cover every nook and corner of the home. It will clean your draperies, curtains, mattresses and walls just as efficiently as it will get the dirt from the carpets and rugs. In short the Royal is a complete housecleaning plant. Come in and see it.

Woman's Interests

GIRL HOLDS RECORD AS "CHILD FINDER"

By a kind of "sixth sense," 18-year-old Rebecca Matosian (right) finds lost children and unites them with their parents. Her work among the quarter million wandering orphans of the Near East has earned her the title at the "Neutral House," of the Near East Relief of "Family Matchmaker." She is working now among the Turkish deportees.

Sister Mary's KITCHEN

Iron rust has a most astonishing way of appearing on garments. Sometimes a pin will be a bit rusty and leave two little brown spots in a most conspicuous place.

When this happens try lemon juice and salt. Wet the spot with a drop of lemon juice, add salt and put on more lemon juice. Lay in the sun and when the salt is dry the rust spot will be gone.

If the sun refuses to put in an appearance for the day, hold the stain with its saturated solution of lemon juice and salt over steam. The rust will be removed.

Menu for Tomorrow
BREAKFAST—Baked apple, scrambled eggs, toast, coffee.
LUNCHEON—Macaroni salad, brown bread and butter, preserves, tea.
DINNER—Tomato soup, broiled white fish, French fried potatoes, baked celery, head lettuce salad, queen of puddings, coffee.

My Own Recipes
As spring draws nearer many vegetables begin to be more plentiful and consequently fall off in price. Head lettuce is usually the first to drop a few cents per pound. There's no salad more delicious and crisp. Whether one chooses the old-fashioned Boston head or the rather modern iceberg, the salad gives piquancy to the whole meal and always goes with everything else.

Macaroni Salad
1 1/2 cups cooked macaroni
1/2 cup salmon
1/2 cup diced celery
1 green pepper
1 onion
2 tablespoons French dressing
Mayonnaise dressing
Use prepared cut macaroni or break the stick into one-half-inch pieces to cook. Mix macaroni, celery, chopped pepper and minced onion and let stand in the French dressing for 30 minutes. Add salmon, orange on lettuce, add mayonnaise and serve.

Baked Celery
2 cups diced celery
1 cup white sauce
2 tablespoons grated cheese
1/2 cup dried bread crumbs
Paprika
Cook celery until tender in boiling salted water. Drain. In a buttered baking dish put a layer of bread crumbs. Melt grated cheese in white sauce and add celery. Pour mixture in baking dish, add paprika and a layer of bread crumbs. Bake in a hot oven for 20 minutes.

Queen of Puddings
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup bread crumbs (soft part of loaf)
2 eggs
4 tablespoons sugar
Grated rind one lemon
3 tablespoons strawberry jam
1/4 teaspoon salt
Scald milk and butter and pour over bread crumbs. Beat yolks of eggs till thick and lemon-colored. Add yolks, lemon rind and sugar to bread crumbs. Pour mixture into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven till set. Remove from oven, spread with jam and cover with the whites of the eggs beaten till stiff and dry with 2 tablespoons of sugar. Return to the oven and brown slightly on top.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

THE OSTRICH MAKES A MEAL

Suddenly the curly yellow ostrich pulled his head out of the ground again with a jerk and blinked his big eyes.

"There's something the matter with me," he said. "I believe I'm hungry. Yes, I'm sure of it. Very hungry! I should like a railroad spike for my dinner, a delicious, tender, railroad spike with a flat top."

Nick and Nancy were relieved to hear this, for they had an idea that he might begin on them, as they were so conveniently near.

"But where am I to get a railroad spike in Topsy-Turvy Land?" went on the ostrich. "I don't believe there's even a railroad here, much less a spike—no, I mean that I don't believe there is a spike here, much less a railroad. No, that's not it, either. Oh, well, it doesn't matter. The thing is, what am I to eat?" And the ostrich blinked his eyes again to show how fast he was thinking.

"Oh, you naughty bird!" cried Nick. "You've eaten our best friend. Now we'll never find our monkey!"

"I've got it!" he cried. "If I can't get a spike I'll have to find something that looks like one. What was that thing that I saw around here a few minutes ago that pushed me and told me to wake up?"

"Oh, that's our Magical Mushroom!" cried Nancy in alarm. "You wouldn't eat it?"

But she was too late. Before she could stoop to put their little fairy friend into her pocket, the ostrich made a quick dive with his beak, and gulp—the Mushroom was gone! All they could see of it was the big lump that kept going further and further down the ostrich's long neck.

"Oh, you naughty bird!" cried Nick. "You've eaten our best friend. Now we'll never find our monkey!"

But what the ostrich sounded exactly like bird talk, the twins couldn't make out a word. The Mushroom was not there to help them understand.
